What is the WEST program?

The purpose of the Washington Educator Skills Tests (WEST) is to assess the basic skills and content knowledge of prospective Washington educators. There are two types of WEST tests: the Washington Educator Skills Test—Basic® (WEST-B®), which measures basic skills in reading, mathematics, and writing, and the Washington Educator Skills Tests—Endorsements™ (WEST-E™), which measure the content knowledge required for endorsement for Washington teaching certificates.

What's new in 2009-2010?

In addition to the 24 WEST-E tests introduced in Fall 2008, you may now register for the 10 additional tests listed below. Score reports for these tests for the September 12, 2009, and November 14, 2009, test administrations will not be released before December 7, 2009, due to standard-setting activities and the determination of passing scores by the PESB.

The Designated World Languages test will be available beginning in January 2010. Score reports for the January 9, 2010, and February 27, 2010, test administrations will not be released before May 3, 2010, due to standard-setting activities and the determination of passing scores by the PESB.

Where do I find more information? How do I register?

The 2009-2010 WEST Registration Bulletin (for both the WEST-B and the WEST-E) is available on the WEST Web site. You may register for both the WEST-B and the WEST-E on the WEST Web site.

How do I prepare for the tests?

The WEST-B study guide and preparation materials for most WEST-E tests are available on the WEST Web site. Preparation materials for the Designated World Languages test will be available in November 2009.
